Maria's background in psychology, a tenacity honed by years of running her own firm, and experience on her feet before the court as a former Provincial Prosecutor, make her an asset to any client, no matter what religion, race, culture or gender. She has the ability to console and counsel her clients as well as the skill to anticipate the opposition's theory and tactics, and turn them to her clients' advantage.

While Maria's focus is personal injury law, she has a passion for social justice and it shows in and out of the courtroom. She pursued a career in law in order to fill a need after noticing that the Philippine community lacked legal representation, and continues to dedicate a portion of her practice to issues that disproportionately affect that community, including migrant worker law.

Maria was called to the Bar in 2007. She earned her Bachelor of Laws from the University of Windsor's Faculty of Law. Her passion, understanding and tenacity make her a powerful advocate and opponent.
